Brain Research Group

Steven Rose:

And in the meantime we'd moved into the course prep labs. I'd got a small research group working with me, I'd brought in a couple of students who'd been already working with me at Imperial, plus a technician who also moved with me and more people were coming in. So we'd got the core of my research group, which was called the Brain Research Group at that point, already established. So we were firing on more than four cylinders.
